RCMP take action on Dziekanski report

The RCMP's watchdog says the national police force is addressing all 16 recommendations on Taser use that flowed from the Robert Dziekanski case.

The issues range from officer training and note-taking, to regular testing of the potent weapons and a stricter protocol on when to fire them.

The Commission for Public Complaints Against the RCMP also said Thursday the force has accepted almost all of its 23 findings in an investigation of the tragic incident.

Masked migrant ordered released

A Chinese man who entered Canada disguised in a mask as an old Caucasian man was ordered released after more than three months of being detained. Immigration and Refugee Board adjudicator Anita Merai-Schwartz ordered the migrant released Thursday on condition he post a $5,000 bond and report weekly to the Canada Border Services Agency.

Lawyer Daniel McLeod, who is representing the migrant, said a Chinese-Canadian closely linked to the young man's family has agreed to post the bond and provide accommodation in Toronto.

Pilot, co-pilot remembered

Pair members of Boundary Bay Flying Club and a formation group called Delta Flight ◐ Aviation investigators examined wreckage Thursday

Two pilots killed when their small plane clipped wings with another aircraft were remembered Thursday as serious, safety-minded aviators who were well-experienced in the demanding skills of formation flying.

Langley pilot Donn Hubble, 60, and Patrick Lobsinger, 70, died Wednesday after the single-engine Cessna they were in touched another plane during a flight east of Vancouver, sending the aircraft into a frigid slough below. The second aircraft landed safely in a nearby farmer's field.

They were among four small planes in the close confines of a formation flight. Hubble and Lobsinger were both active in the local flying community and had been involved in formation flying for years, said friend and fellow pilot Harry Pride.

Pride said the fatal crash has been "devastating" for the area's tight-knit flying community. It's already prompted him to take a break from formation flying, at least for the time being.

"We're all very sad, this is terrible, because these were awfully nice guys and we knew them well," he said.

Sgt. Mariam Dickson of the RCMP said the Transportation Safety Board planned to use a helicopter to lift the downed aircraft out of the water so they could transport it to a local fire hall.

Shadow of village looms over legacies

Vancouver mayor trumpets business gains and community spirit after the Olympics $1 billion village still haunts city hall Expert says that true cost of Games not known for years

MATT KIELTYKA/METRO

▶ Mayor Gregor Robertson had an unforgettable Olympic Games but has had his work cut out since, especially with the fallout from the Olympic Village.

Vancouver 2010: One Year Later

MATT KIELTYKA
@METRONEWS.CA

The world partied in Vancouver during the 2010 Winter Games and then left us with the tab.

The financial implications of the Olympics have been a hot-button issue since the event wrapped up last year.

VANOC announced its final budget balanced out at $1.8 billion, but not until an influx of funding from the government and Olympic committee.

Meanwhile, the City of Vancouver is still trying to figure out what to do with the Olympic Village, which has put taxpayers on the hook for nearly $800 million after the city forced the development into receivership due to poor sales and the developer's inability to pay back loans.

"Dealing with the village has been really tough," admitted Mayor Gregor Robertson. "It's a multi-year challenge to build it, refinance, stabilize and now sell the project. It's a billion dollar project and there's a lot at risk."

Robertson is adamant the city can turn the corner on the village, even when a majority of the luxury condos sit empty and reports circulating this week suggest many of them may be sold at heavily discounted prices.

Even with the trouble, Robertson said the Games were worth having.

"If you look at all the positives it generated, it outweighed the cost," he said, pointing to the $306 million apparently generated through business deals during the Games and the physical legacies left over in form of venues, facilities and community centres.

And then there's the community spirit the Games instilled.

"How do you put a dollar figure on that?" Robertson asked. "We've got really clear legacies and a big positive attitude piece that combine to make (the cost of the Games) a net positive."

But UBC economist Tsur Somerville warned the public wouldn't get a clear picture of the costs and benefits for many years.

"These things tend to add up and I wouldn't trust politicians to gauge it," he said. "We had a great time and it was a really good experience and that doesn't factor into it. But you just cannot gauge the Olympics after one year."

CAMERON SPENCER/GETTY IMAGES

Did we succeed in owning the podium?

For some, Own The Podium is a celebrated national initiative that helped athletes win a record number of Olympic medals in 2010. Others argue it puts too much pressure on athletes and is unsportsmanlike.

But there's another side to the issue, according VANOC CEO John Furlong, who said the windfall of the program is a continued sense of national pride.

"Own the Podium was the finishing touch (of the Games)," Furlong said.

"(We didn't realize how much) Canadian results would affect national morale."

"It gripped the country and gave people a sense of being attached to something profound."

Rob VanWynsberghe, who helped put together the UBC Olympic Games Impact Study, pointed out that Own The Podium proved to be particularly successful for our female athletes, who won 15 of the 26 Canadian medals.

"Maybe we (should) think more carefully about how we can help women participate in sport because that appears where we can do well." KRISTEN THOMPSON

Our haul

Canada took home 26 medals including 14 gold, breaking the record for the most gold medals won in a Winter Olympics.

- It was the first time a host nation had won the gold medal count since 1952.
- Until 2010, no Canadian athlete had ever won an Olympic gold at home.

Twitter question

We asked: What is the most important legacy the Games have left us?

- @maddynorton Jon Montgomery chugging half a pitcher of beer in one go on worldwide television. It brought a tears of joy to my eyes.
- @Jonathan_Miykel the 2010 olympics left us w/ a legacy of having a live olympic event in R city, it gave us more of a city fame 4 tourists.

2010 Games went against the mould

For people experiencing an Olympics for the first time, Vancouver may have seemed like a typical run-of-the-mill Games.

But Vancouver broke the mould, said Lucia Montanarella, director of press operations for VANOC and media consultant to the IOC.

"I think Vancouver could be the turning point in terms of the (IOC) learning that there could be different angles of looking at things," Montanarella said.

Vancouver marked the first time in modern Olympic history that an organizing committee aimed at staging a carbon-neutral Games.

Achievements, according to a David Suzuki Foundation report, included the building of energy-efficient venues, use of clean-energy sources and heavy reliance on public transit.

Rob VanWynsberghe, co-author of the UBC Olympic Games Impact Study, said the city did an "incredible job" at leveraging the Games to make Vancouver one of the world's greenest cities.

"The Games created a kind of launching pad," he said, adding it may have set the groundwork to Vancouver becoming a real leader in green infrastructure.

The aforementioned unprecedented use of public transit was also a novelty, as far as Olympics go.

"I can tell you for sure that the use of public transit in the Olympics has never happened before Vancouver," said Montanarella.

Since the Games the IOC has seen cities vying for the 2018 Olympics include the use of public transportation as a part of their bids.

Sebastian Coe, head of the London 2012 Organizing Committee and former Olympian, said Vancouver introduced a new kind of passion for sport.

"You had stadiums in Vancouver that were full, and they were full of people that wanted to be there," he said. "There was a passion there."

But Coe said he doesn't plan on mimicking Vancouver.

"It's not (about) replicating the system," added Montanarella of Vancouver's impact on future Games. "(Rather, it's about) showing things can be done differently."

KIMIYA SHOKOOHI

'Warmest Games'

Last February it seemed there was a lot cynical hyperbole about the Olympics, but our politeness, patriotism and propensity toward self-deprecation left an impact on some foreign journalists. Here are a few nice things they had to say about us:

▶ "The Olympics went into overtime Sunday. It was perfect. No one wanted the Warmest Games to end. Warmest weather. Warmest hosts."
— The Miami Herald

▶ "Graciousness is their default mode here. For the last two weeks, beaming has been a way of life. In a nod to the local vernacular, let me just say this is the nicest city I've ever been in."
— The Los Angeles Times

VANOC CEO reflects on the Vancouver Olympics one year later ◐ Discusses the toll the job had on his life and the pride he felt leading the team toward a pivotal moment of nationhood ◐ Talks about his book Patriot Hearts: Inside the Olympics that Changed a Country

'I THOUGHT WE COULD BE NATION BUILDERS' JOHN FURLONG

Vancouver 2010: One Year Later

KRISTEN THOMPSON
@METRONEWS.CA

Tell me about the process of putting down your thoughts and memories in a book.
It was a labour of love, there's no doubt about it. The Games wrapped up ... and I thought, "This is the best it's going to ever be." There was such a euphoria in the country and to sit down and to try to top that (by writing a book) would be difficult. But within a couple of days a publisher came to see me and said the Games have changed the country and someone has to write about it.

What toll did the job — its stresses and long hours — have on your personal life?
It was obviously very difficult. The whole organization was under massive stress. I was lucky I have a big family, although my kids almost did without their dad for 10 years. It's not human to work 4:30 a.m. to midnight every day, but we did.

What was the biggest success of the Games?
The Games are a living example ... of the power of vision. I remember sitting down 10 years ago and describing what I thought could happen to the country on a human scale, (how the Games could) touch everyone. People thought it was too ambitious.

What impact did the Games have on the city's and country's collective psyche, and how will it have impacted our sense of self going forward?
The city is a more strident, confident, happier city than it was and it's in a place to evolve. Something has been left behind — (a feeling) that we're a "we can do anything" city. The city came out of this with a completely different sense of itself.

I thought we could be nation builders. We took the torch relay down every street and back road in the country and Canadians moved from being spectators to owners of the Games. It was the public that took the Games over and gave the country and the world an experience they hadn't experienced with a Games before. We're (a) huge (country) and it's not easy (to unite it).

What did we do that was innovative, that others hadn't done before?
We were the only Olympic Games that ever set out to make it about the country. We tried to tell a great Canadian story ... People got to see what it was to be Canadian. We wanted every venue to be a contributor into the future (and) knew we'd be measured for generations against all our achievements.

We also staged the Olympic Games against the worst economy and built the venues in the most heated economy B.C. has ever experienced.

How did Sidney Crosby's goal punctuate the Games?
Everyone felt they had an assist on that goal when it went in the net. Speaking with (Scott) Niedermayer, he said the players knew that it was no longer about hockey, they were carrying the hopes and dreams of the country on their shoulders, and the country would look back on it through the lens of what happened in that game. Winning the last medal was the laws of natural justice prevailing, and we got rewarded for a lot of hard work.

New trial for men accused of Hells Angels affiliation

B.C.'s top court has overturned a lower court ruling and ordered a new trial for two men acquitted on charges of belonging to a criminal organization.

The B.C. Appeal Court ruling involves John Punko and Randy Potts, who were accused of belonging to the East End Charter of Hells Angels in Vancouver.

They were acquitted of the charges in 2009, but the Crown challenged the decision.

On Thursday, Appeal Court Justice Pamela Kirkpatrick ordered a new trial on the criminal organization charges, ruling the lower court judge didn't properly apply the legal test. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Conviction in women's deaths

A man convicted of murdering two women in the Fraser Valley in 2007 was sentenced Thursday to life in prison.

Davey Mateo Butorac, 32, will not be eligible for parole for 23 years. He was convicted of second-degree murder in July 2010 in the deaths of Sheryl Lynn Koroll, 50, in Abbotsford and Gwendolyn Jo Lawton, 46, in Langley. Both women were drug-addicted sex trade workers. METRO

Liberals vote to change vote

The B.C. Liberal party will vote on proposed amendments to the party's constitution at the Vancouver Convention Centre Saturday. If passed, the party will use a weighting voted system to elect its new leader. Proponents said the changes are designed to increase representation within less populated electoral districts. ▶ Renato Romozzi, manager of corporate engineering for the Royal Canadian Mint, explains how the 2010 Olympic medals were fabricated to visitors.

The 2010 Olympic medals are on display at the Royal Canadian Mint's Granville Street boutique (752 Granville St.) until Sunday as part of the celebrations around the Olympic Games' first anniversary.

The medals were designed by aboriginal artist Corrine Hunt and showcase West Coast First Nations imagery.

"No two medals are alike," said Renato Romozzi, one of the medals' chief engineers.

The mint expects 3,000 visitors over the course of the exhibition, said Christine Aquino, a mint spokesperson. Admission is free, but visitors had to reserve tickets is advance for the event, which is now at capacity. NATALIE KAUR JOHAL

Events

- Saturday, 4 p.m. Lighting of the Olympic Cauldron: Gather together for the first anniversary of the official lighting of the Olympic Cauldron at Jack Poole Plaza.
- Saturday, 9 a.m.-11 p.m. Robson Street will be closed between Howe and Seymour for hours of free skating, entertainment and art. There will be an official anniversary ceremony beginning at 11:30 a.m. with special appearances from Olympic athletes.
- Saturday The Granville Mall, between Smithe and Dunsmuir, will be bustling with road hockey, buskers and an illuminating LunarFest Procession (6:30 p.m). Partygoers are encouraged to wear red and white and bring a food bank donation. Watch for "flash mobs" and Metro's Matt Kieltyka taking part in a Fivehole for Food street hockey charity match.
- Saturday, 5 p.m. Lost Lagoon, Stanley Park: The massive Canadian flag at Lost Lagoon has been reinstalled and its 52-foot flagpole will be lit for the Olympic anniversary weekend. Best viewing of the flag will be in front of Nature House, at the base of Chilco Street.

Mubarak refuses to leave, hands powers to VP

- Mubarak says in speech he wants to 'protect' constitution
- Tears of disappointment, anger among protesters

Egypt's Hosni Mubarak refused to step down or leave the country and instead handed his powers to his vice-president Thursday, remaining president and ensuring regime control over the reform process. Stunned protesters in central Cairo who demand his ouster waved their shoes in contempt and shouted, "Leave, leave, leave."

The rapidly moving events raised the question of whether a rift had opened between Mubarak and the military command. Hours earlier, a council of the military's top generals announced it had stepped in to secure the country, and a senior commander announced to protesters in Tahrir Square that all their demands would soon be met, raising cries of victory that Mubarak was on his way out.

After Mubarak's speech, protest organizers called for the army to take action to oust him, and they vowed increased protests on Friday. Several hundred thousand had packed into Tahrir Square, ecstatic with expectation that Mubarak would announce his resignation in his nighttime address. Instead, they watched in shocked silence as he spoke, slapping their foreheads in anger and disbelief. Some broke into tears.

Around 1,000 marched on the state television headquarters several blocks away, guarded by the military with barbed wire and tanks. "They are the liars," the crowd shouted, pointing at the building, chanting, "We won't leave, they will leave."

FAR FEWER STUDENTS IN CANADIAN-BUILT AFGHAN SCHOOLS

Schools in Kandahar that were built or renovated on the Canadian government's dime have far fewer students than official enrolment numbers suggest, a Canadian Press investigation has found.

Unaccompanied visits to the schools where work has been completed lay bare the stark contrast between what appears on paper and the reality on the ground.

The government of Kandahar's school registry lists many thousands more students than there actually are in the classrooms of Canadian-funded schools across the province.

The findings call into question the efficacy of one of the Conservative government's legacy projects in southern Afghanistan.

Feds fire shots over crime bill

Tories blast Ignatieff for not supporting legislation
Grits answer back, accusing government of hiding costs

The battle lines were firmly drawn Thursday for a bitter federal election fight in which Conservatives and Liberals will be spitting vitriol at each other over who is tougher on crime.

With the possibility of a spring election still hanging over their collective heads, the Tories launched one of their toughest soft-on-crime offensives on the Opposition Liberals. The Liberals punched back, in effect saying, bring it on.

The heated sparring served as a preview of how law-and-order issues could play out on the campaign trail if the Tory minority is defeated and Canadians are forced to the polls in the coming months.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson blasted Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff for deciding not to support a bill that would impose mandatory sentences for drug crime. Nicholson, along with retired Ontario police chief-turned-Tory MP Julian Fantino, repeatedly called Ignatieff a "flip-flopper" on the issue.

▶ Michael Ignatieff

"I think they have a lot of explaining to do to people who are very concerned about drug trafficking in this country," Nicholson told a news conference.

But the Liberals immediately fired back, as the party's public safety critic, Mark Holland, accused the government of hiding the true cost of the bill, which many groups — from churches, to health-care workers, to lawyers — also oppose.

"At some point we have to draw a line in the sand. We cannot allow Canada to become California," Holland said. "States like California find themselves near bankruptcy, with policies they are desperate to undo and have little power to change. They have no money for health, no money for roads, no money for infrastructure."

Holland said the Liberals can't blindly support a Conservative bill when they've been turned down repeatedly for a true costing of it.

Prison blues

The federal government's new tough-on-crime laws are going to mean more guards and more crowding in cell blocks, says the head of the prison system.

- Don Head, commissioner of the Correctional Service of Canada, says he can't release an overall estimate of the costs of all the proposed legislation. He did say he's going to have to hire 4,000 more people over the next two years.
- Most of the new people will be guards, although there will also be new nurses, psychologists, social workers, parole officers and support staff.
- The crackdown on crime will also mean more crowding in cell blocks, at least until new prison construction is complete.
- Double-bunking in prisons had been running at about 10 per cent for years, but has crept up to around 13 per cent today and it will get worse, he said. "We anticipate, as we move through this process of building new units that were announced, that we will reach levels of up to 20, 30 per cent of double-bunking before those units are actually complete and give me some bed relief to move people back to single cells."

HARPER'S JUDGES

A newly appointed judge's speedy transition from active politics to the bench is raising questions about politicization of the judiciary under Stephen Harper.

Brian Abrams was among a raft of judicial appointments announced last Friday by the Harper government.

He was named to the family division of Ontario's Superior Court of Justice — less than two months after resigning as the federal Conservative candidate in Kingston.

In total, the Liberals maintain the Harper government has appointed 39 judges with Tory ties since the 2008 election.

Liberals rewarded their own partisans with judicial appointments when they were in power — a practice Harper used to rail against.

Ontario mom gets new trial in son's death

- Marquardt jailed 14 years based on bad pathology
- In similar cases prosecution dropped, stayed charges

Tammy Marquardt tenderly hugged her five-month-old daughter on Thursday minutes after Ontario's top court granted her a new trial in the death of her toddler 17 years ago.

Then, stepping into the sunshine, Marquardt said it was "torture" being labelled a child killer on the strength of expert evidence from now-disgraced pathologist, Charles Smith.

"Try having your heart ripped out and someone squeezing it right in front of your face," Marquardt said. "Finally, the nightmare is coming to an end and I'm waking up."

It took the Ontario Court of Appeal just five minutes to conclude the 38-year-old mother had been the victim of a miscarriage of justice and quash her second-degree murder conviction.

In doing so, Justice Marc Rosenberg said the court recognized that Marquardt had been through a "terrible" ordeal. "There are no real words for it. It's just a lot of pain and hurt that cannot be fixed," Marquardt said later.

Snow, skirts and shovels

Too much snow and not enough beaus — so says a squad of mini-skirted, high-heeled young women wielding snow shovels in Russia's second city.

Seven women dressed for maximum hotness came to the frigid square in front of St. Petersburg's Kazan Cathedral on Thursday to chip away at snow and ice and demand better city snow removal.

"We'd also like more foreign men to come to the city."

Spokeswoman Eva Tornado claimed that tourism experts say foreign visitors avoid St. Petersburg in the winter because of the city's problems in dealing with its snow.

Birth bridges borders

Isreali mother says she received VIP treatment at Palestinian hospital

DAN BALILTY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ An Israeli woman kisses her newborn baby boy after giving birth in a Palestinian hospital.

Not every new mother gets a handwritten note from the Palestinian president.

But this was a rare occurrence, an Israeli in a Palestinian hospital.

Nisreen Chayedri, who grew up Jewish but converted to Islam, was shopping in the West Bank town of Ramallah Wednesday when she went into labour.

Her husband, an Arab citizen of Israel, rushed her to the nearest hospital.

Chayedri, who speaks only Hebrew, caused a stir at the hospital, though she says she got VIP treatment.

"They treated me very nicely, like a member of the family," she said.

A Hebrew-speaking doctor translated for her as she delivered a five-pound baby boy.

In honour of the experience, the couple named the boy Omri — a name used by both Jews and Arabs.

Palestinian Minister of Health Fathi Abu Moghli said patients are treated regardless of religion or nationality. He hopes the birth will help build "normal relations that will allow many Israeli patients to come to Palestinian hospitals."

EHUD BARAK

Israeli defence minister under fire

JERUSALEM. In his current post as defence minister, Ehud Barak has created enemies everywhere.

Following a series of blunders, the former prime minister is now blamed for everything from the collapse of peace talks with the Palestinians to the disintegration of the iconic Labor Party to infighting roiling the top military echelons.

▶ Ehud Barak

Barak was recently accused of turning the Israeli military "into something between a viper's nest and a cuckoo's nest" by Ben Cassite, a newspaper columnist and author of a biography about Barak and his heroic military exploits.

Barak's troubles could also lead to problems for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

▶ Defence Minister Peter McKay announces the new Hero vessels in Ottawa on Thursday.

Coast Guard ships to carry heroic legacies

Vessels honour those who lost lives serving others

A new Coast Guard vessel under construction in Halifax will be named in honour of Capt. Nicola Goddard, the first Canadian woman to be killed in combat.

Capt. Goddard died in Afghanistan in 2006. Her name will be carried by one of nine new midshore patrol vessels to be known as the Hero class. The first of the 43-metre ships is expected to enter service with the Coast Guard this year, with the last delivered by 2013.

In addition to Goddard, the ships carry the names of another soldier killed in Afghanistan, two members of the Canadian Coast Guard, a fisheries officer, two RCMP officers and two First World War soldiers.

Among them are:

Cpl. Mark Robert McLaren, of Peterborough, Ont., who was killed in an ambush in Afghanistan in 2008.

Fisheries Officer Agapit LeBlanc, of Bouctouche, N.B., who was killed in 1926 while investigating illegal fishing vessels. His murder remains unsolved.

WIKILEAKS

Assange a 'conspiracy theorist': New book

A tell-all book by a WikiLeaks insider casts founder Julian Assange as an "emperor" who has become just the kind of public figure he is trying to expose.

Daniel Domscheit-Berg, the former WikiLeaks spokesman who left the secret-spilling website after a dispute with Assange, writes about his euphoria at the website's spectacular rise as well as his disillusionment with a leader he describes as delusional and power-crazed.

He said one of his motives for writing Inside WikiLeaks was to clarify the events that led to the falling-out.

"We need to set the record straight before Assange turns into a cult, a pop phenomenon," Domscheit-Berg said in Berlin on Thursday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Strong loonie drives production offshore

Canadian firms are increasingly shifting their production offshore in response to the pressures of globalization and the strong loonie, Export Development Canada says.

A new study from the Crown corporation shows sales from foreign affiliates of Canadian firms grew by more than twice the rate of exports from firms within Canada between the years 2000 and 2008.

Exports from foreign affiliates expanded from $367 billion in 2000 to $508 billion in 2008.

During the same period, the loonie moved from the low 60-cent levels early in the decade to well above parity with the U.S. dollar during the 2008 commodity boom.

Though comparable data is available only to 2008, the study's author, Jean-Francois Lamoureux, says the trend has likely accelerated since the economic downturn. If up-to-date data were available, it would show that sales from foreign affiliates are on par with total exports originating from inside Canada, he said.

"This is showing Canadian companies are adapting to the realities of global trade today," Lamoureux explained.

Talks have valued Twitter at approximately $8B to $10B US

Google and Facebook are both sniffing around Twitter with an eye to buying the social networking service.

Sources tell the Wall Street Journal that the talks have valued Twitter at between $8 billion and $10 billion US.

The same sources say Twitter had revenue of $45 million in 2010, but lost money as it hired and invested in data centres.

Investors have shown keen interest in social networking services.

Twitter has had a popular role in organizing international political protest as in the uprisings in Egypt and last year's protests in Iran.

Some have called the site "the medium of the movement." In some situations, it has been a source for news updates.

It seems governments have caught the Twitter bug, too.

In Canada, Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi tweeted updates about his campaign platform.

On Thursday, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations hosted a global town hall at Twitter headquarters to talk foreign policy with users of the online messaging service.

Last month, daily coupon website Groupon raised $950 million in financing after reportedly turning down Google's offer to purchase it for $6 billion.

Twitter and Facebook declined to comment. Google did not immediately respond to messages seeking comment.

Movie exhibitors adjust to life without Avatar

- Hollywood experienced dip in revenue from 2009
- Premium-priced 3-D movies made up some lost ground

Moviegoers paid well to see the latest offerings in 3-D at Cineplex Inc.'s in the fourth quarter, but that wasn't quite enough to match the revenue generated in the prior holiday season when record-breaker Avatar ruled the box office.

The operator of Canada's largest theatre chain said it earned $240.8 million in revenue for the three months ended Dec. 31, down from $247.2 million in the same period a year ago.

The slide came as attendance dropped 7.9 per cent. A about 1.4 million fewer tickets were sold in the quarter and concession sales slipped.

"The premium charge for 3-D product more than offset the slight attendance reduction."
ELLIS JACOB, CINEPLEX PRESIDENT AND CEO

However, profits still increased to $10.9 million or 45.8 cents per unit, from $9.5 million or 46.2 cents per unit a year ago.

Premium-priced movies include RealD 3D movies, as well as both regular and 3D Imax screenings and films shown in Cineplex's new UltraAVX theatres, which are equipped with larger screens, digital projection and better sound.

However, the premium priced tickets couldn't offset the lacklustre slate. During the quarter, the top performing films at Cineplex theatres were Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows, Disney's Tangled and Jackass 3D.

None of those films delivered the massive returns that James Cameron's Avatar helped achieve during the same period of 2009.

It took in nearly $2.8 billion at the worldwide box office, one of the top grossing films in history.

Canada's largest airline flying high

Air Canada, the country's largest airline, said profits rose to $134 million during the fourth quarter, more than double the losses they booked last year.

The airline capped a strong year by leveraging the economic recovery to attract more business travellers going to international destinations.

"The results reported today confirm that we are indeed headed in the right direction," CEO Calin Rovinescu said.

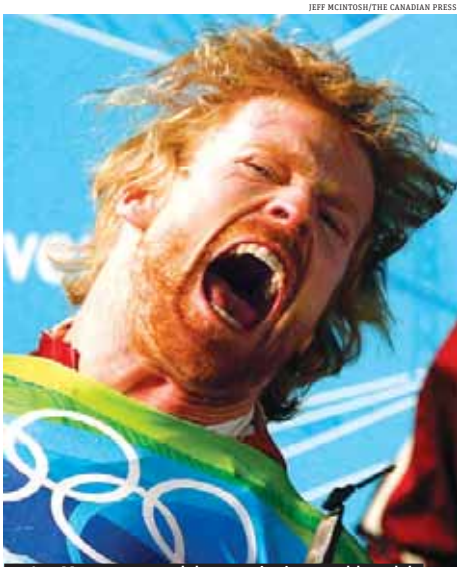
JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS



▶ Jon Montgomery celebrates winning a gold medal last February in the men's skeleton competition at the 2010 Vancouver Olympic Winter Games in Whistler.

5 MINUTES WITH: JON MONTGOMERY

Jon Montgomery's gold medal skeleton run in Whistler during the 2010 Winter Olympics certainly opened a lot of doors for the Russell, Man., native. Metro caught up with the 31-year-old gold medallist during the skeleton World Cup tour in Austria.

How has life been since you captured the gold in Whistler?
I'd be crazy to think I could have travelled the world on someone else's dime with gold. It's been amazing. I was about to be part of a trip to Uganda and South Africa during the World Cup and speak with youth there. I've been to New York City for a charity function and had the opportunity to engage with the Canadian public. It's been a crazy experience and I'm always grateful it has worked out this way.

Do people recognize you now when you're walking around?
Definitely in Canada, people are always coming up to me, thanking me and asking if I have the medal. I try to have it and let people touch it, because it really is Canada's medal. A lot of people remember me just as much for drinking out of a pitcher of beer, which is cool, too. If I'm somehow more endearing to people or identify with me because of that moment, then I have to thank the woman who handed it to me. People elsewhere don't know who the hell I am, but I've realized there are Canadians everywhere. I was in an airport in Hong Kong and a Canadian came up and started talking to me because he recognized me.

Are you comfortable with all that attention?
I've never been one to be shy and if I said I didn't enjoy the attention I'd be a hypocrite. I really like meeting people and talking to them and it hasn't gotten old so far.

We know what people's enduring memory of you is, but what do you remember most fondly about the Olympics?
To be honest, the thing I remember the most is just being able to sit down with my family after the event. I had just won the gold and we all got together in an apartment. It was quiet and nice because those are the people that have been by my side from the beginning and all helped me get to where I am today. So it was nice just to kick back and relax after. After that, I remember watching Sid the Kid score in the gold-medal (hockey) game and going crazy. The whole country was watching, including me, and it's something I'll never forget.

Fridays on your mind

Letters & Tweets

If you're anything like us, Fridays just haven't been the same since Family Matters went off the air. So, after more than a decade of hollow, Urkel-less Friday evenings, we asked you for tips on how to unwind from a hectic work week.

@t_stark_calgary: Best Friday is: Go home and relax with my wife & a good movie. Key: Turn off the cellphone and 'puter for the night. Be human.

@vanrestomngr: Gonna find my baby gonna hold her tight gonna grab some afternoon delight. Sky rockets in flight. Afternoon delight.

@crestsofwaves: I relax by watching TV or listen to music.

@jterr88: The No. 1 response has to be: Happy Hour!

@kimmcneilyoga: I teach yoga on Fridays. It's (almost) as good as taking a class because my students are great!

@kimmcneilyoga: Plus, afterwards I go out for a yummy meal with a good friend. It's a weekly ritual.

@iamaimee: drink homemade melon and vanilla shake while sitting on a massage chair and watching a good movie with the fam. :)

Getting Bieber fever

Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin debate Justin Bieber: Never Say Never Early footage of Canadian superstar gives music documentary a heart

Richard Crouse: Mark, generally these kind of music biographies are simply made up of backstage footage and embarrassing childhood photos wedged in between the tunes, and this movie is kind of like that as well, but what really sold me on the film was the picture it painted of Bieber before he got famous.

Mark Breslin: I don't think either of us is the target demographic for the movie. I've had very little exposure to the Bieber phenomenon, so the movie was fresh to my eyes. Yes, I liked the footage of Bieber before he was famous, especially the bit of him playing competent drums on a chair at a very early age.

RC: To say we're not the target market is an understatement, like saying that Justin Bieber has a few female fans, but there's no denying that the kid has talent. The music in the concert sequences sounds like white noise to my ears, but in the early footage of him playing and singing on the streets of Stratford and drumming with a local band is pretty impressive. I thought the movie presented him as being less pre-packaged than other teen stars. What did you think?

MB: Well, that's what they'd like us to think. There are a lot of references to how Bieber achieved his success without the Disney or Nickelodeon machines, and that's true. He is the product of some grass roots push, and I found the footage of that very interesting. But when his manager — who is more likable than most — calls him the "underdog" I call that spin. Or even more proof that the Internet has created a new business model. And what did you think of the 3-D?

RC: The "underdog" reference was the most glaringly disingenuous thing in the movie. Anyone selling out Madison Square Garden in under half-an-hour is not an underdog — anything but. If anything, he is as you say, a new kind of business model — fame by YouTube. How 21st Century. Makes the American Idol format seem weathered and tired. As for the 3-D, it works in the concert sequences, less so in the documentary sequences but the little girls will love how Bieber seems to jump off the screen.

MB: Jump off the screen indeed! Scary — I really didn't need the moppet in my lap!

Plot synopsis

▶ Justin Bieber: Never Say Never is a 3-D story of a pop prodigy who mastered a drum kit before he was 10 years old and sold out Madison Square Garden when he was barely old enough to drive. Using a mix of archival and concert footage, it follows Bieber from his humble beginnings in Stratford, Ont., to superstardom.

Scene in brief

The Oscar-bound Quebec film Incendies is continuing to pile up accolades, snagging a leading 10 nominations Wednesday for the province's prestigious Jutra Awards.

Nods for Incendies include best film, best director for Denis Villeneuve, best screenplay, and best actress for both Lubna Azabal and Melissa Desormeaux-Poulin.

Barney's Version, based on Mordecai Richler's last novel, nabbed four nominations, including best screenplay, art direction, makeup and hairstyling.

Incendies tells the wrenching story of Quebec twins who travel to the Middle East and uncover dark secrets from their mother's past. It will compete in the best foreign-language film category when the Oscars are handed out on Feb. 27.

Sci-fi meets teen drama

I Am Number Four based on successful novel
But director started adaptation before book's publication
Saw potential for a 'good old-fashioned' genre film

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

In a manner reminiscent of popular blockbusters from the 1980s, I Am Number Four combines sci-fi action spectacle with teen drama.

Director DJ Caruso (Disturbia) is not only aware of these similarities, but actually cultivated them. "I have five kids and I've been trying for years to make a good old-fashioned Amblin film like The Goonies," Caruso told Metro.

"Unlike huge franchises like Twilight or Harry Potter, there were no preconceived notions of what the movie would be."
DIRECTOR DJ CARUSO

"When I got this script I immediately felt like it was the one. I loved the way it combined action and science fiction with the story of a kid who realizes that who he wants to become and who he can become are two different people. That seemed like a simple, relatable story that would be perfect to hang a genre movie on."

The film is about a teen who seems like everyone else, except that he's secretly one of the last members of an extinct alien race that is slowly being picked off by reptilian assassins.

Though based on a successful novel, Caruso surprisingly started his adaptation before the source material had even been published.

"When I read the manuscript it still had typos and red writing in the margins," recalled the director.

"But it was liberating because unlike huge franchises like Twilight or Harry Potter, there were no preconceived notions of what the movie would be. No one could get mad with me because they don't know what to expect."

Caruso was also lucky enough to have the benefit of launching a franchise with two seasoned blockbuster veterans serving as creative producers: Steven Spielberg and Michael Bay.

"Steven was very involved in developing the script, and then Michael helped me with the visual effects in post," said Caruso. "They were helpful bookends on the production and I couldn't have done it without them because this was new territory for me."

Breakout role for Pettyfer?

Alex Pettyfer has learned rather quickly that he has a real hankering for stunt work, even if it can get a bit dangerous sometimes.

"You kind of want to get hurt, because it gives you more adrenaline; it gives you more pump," says 20-year-old Pettyfer. "But yeah, I love the whole action aspect of it."

Luckily, his latest starring role as the lead teenage alien stranded on Earth in I Am Number Four, gave him plenty of opportunity to scratch that particular itch.

Though as a teen he starred in the British spy flick Stormbreaker and followed that up with a pair of films, I Am Number Four feels like a real beginning for Pettyfer. "This is the first thing that's come out that I'm very, very proud of," he says. ● NED EHRBAR

January Jones has finally come back to the future.

The star of the 1960s-set TV drama Mad Men, Jones is now establishing herself in Hollywood with no less than three big-screen thrillers in the works — starting with Unknown, which hits theatres Feb. 18.

"I'm a fan of all kinds of movies," said Jones recently in Los Angeles.

"If they're intelligently done, (thrillers) just make you think. They're sometimes stimulating to a point where you forget where you are and what you're doing and who you are and you're just invested in this snowball of craziness."

In Unknown, Jones's character is married to a man (Liam Neeson) who, after an accident in Germany, awakens from a coma to discover that nobody recognizes him — including his wife.

"It's probably hardest for me (to discuss the film) because I can't go into detail about my character… so let's talk about something else," laughed Jones.

"It's great to talk about this movie because I'm a fan of it. I saw it a couple weeks ago and you're always nervous going in — you don't know if you're going to be promoting something you don't like, but I really enjoyed watching it… so I'm happy to be promoting it."

Jones also relished working with Neeson, who after the 2008 thriller Taken, has established himself as the perfect empathetic anti-hero for movies like Unknown.

"Casting in any movie is important but in this one specifically I think that Liam had the perfect balance of someone you believe could be the good guy/bad guy — whatever he is," said Jones attempting to not reveal a plot twist. "He's also just a wonderful actor — you kind of believe whatever he's selling."

Coming soon

Jones' other upcoming movie titles:

- The Hungry Rabbit Jumps: After his wife is assaulted, Nicolas Cage enlists others to help him seek vengeance.
- X-Men: First Class: A prequel to the other X-Men thrillers, Jones plays a telepathic mutant named Emma Frost.

Unknown

- Twist ending: "I don't think there are any clues," said Jones of the film's twist ending. "I think (director Jaume Collett-Serra) purposely left them out. It's not underestimating the audience in any way."

Not enough action to carry Eagle

The Eagle
Genre: Action
Director: Kevin Macdonald
Stars: Channing Tatum, Jamie Bell, Donald Sutherland
◍◍

Kevin Macdonald's The Eagle isn't a particularly bad movie, it's just confused and flawed. The Touching The Void director can't decide if he's making a handsome historical epic or a sweaty action thriller and ends up with a muddled mixture that won't satisfy the audience for either genre.

The dependably bland Channing Tatum plays a young Roman soldier who ventures into the wilds of Roman-occupied Britain to honour his father's memory by recapturing his lost legion's golden eagle statue. An English slave (Jamie Bell) accompanies him and their relationship is stretched and flipped throughout the journey.

The dynamic between the two central characters is intriguing, but Tatum boasts about as much charisma and acting ability as a piece of petrified wood with pectoral implants, and Bell seems bored by his co-star.

Thanks to miscasting and confused writing, the action sequences work better than the character scenes and there isn't nearly enough action to carry the film. With a stronger lead and tighter pacing, The Eagle could have been interesting. Instead, it's merely frustrating with moments that suggest what could have been. PHIL BROWN

From Prada To Nada
Genre: Comedy
Director: Angel Gracia
Stars: Camilla Belle, Alexa Vega, Adriana Barraza
◍½

From Prada To Nada is a Beverly Hills update of Jane Austin's Sense And Sensibility in the Clueless vain, but without the sense of invention or the strong character comedy. The film follows two rich young Latino sisters whose father suddenly dies and leaves them penniless, forcing them to move to a poor neighbourhood and learn how to appreciate the simple pleasures of life. The message is sweet, but it's hardly original. PHIL BROWN

Gnomeo & Juliet
Genre: Animation
Director: Kelly Asbury
Stars: James McAvoy, Emily Blunt
◍◍◍

Shakespeare gets a 3-D animated makeover in Gnomeo & Juliet, a wacky retelling of the bard's most famous play about two star-crossed lovers who were not meant to fall in love. In this case, the suitors are clay garden gnomes from warring lawns. It's a thin premise likely originated from the novelty title alone but the film's light zaniness actually plays well on-screen. Clever gags and wordplay carry the film. STEVE GOW

Just Go With It
Genre: Comedy
Director: Dennis Dugan
Stars: Jennifer Aniston, Adam Sandler, Nicole Kidman
◍◍◍

The dark clouds hovering over Jennifer Aniston and Adam Sandler's careers may have lifted at least temporarily thanks to this sweetly funny, fetching and family friendly rom-com about lying. Sandler's a plastic surgeon who spins a ruse to win a woman that is so daring that it takes his assistant (Aniston), her children and his best friend to make it work. The actors playing Aniston's kids are cute too. ANNE BRODIE

Modra
Genre: Drama
Director: Ingrid Veninger
Stars: Hallie Switzer, Alexander Gammal, Mathieu Chesneau
◍◍◍

A very sweet and delicate love story that bears flattering resemblance to Before Sunrise. First time actors Hallie Switzer and Alexander Gammal star as a pair of teens who embark on a romantic trip to Slovakia despite barely knowing each other. Canadian filmmaker Ingrid Veninger cast the film almost entirely with family members and gets extraordinarily naturalistic performances out of a group of non-actors. PHIL BROWN

His daughter is walking the line

Nominated for a Grammy, Rosanne Cash speaks about her legendary father and the huge popularity of The List

With a bestselling memoir and an album that never seemed to stop resonating with fans, Rosanne Cash celebrated the end of 2010 with a long break full of restful sleep.

This year seems no better, though. She's up for a Grammy Award for The List, her tribute to her iconic father, Johnny Cash; she's writing songs with Rhett Miller of the Old 97's, Joe Henry and by herself in anticipation of a new album; and she'll join Henry and Billy Bragg in the studio in March for another new project.

She's also planning to tour this year and is taking notes for a follow-up to her highly regarded memoir, Composed, which earned spots on the best of lists of Publisher's Weekly, Kirkus Reviews and Amazon.com.

"So I still have a lot of work ahead of me," Cash said. "I'm looking for more sleep. Maybe in 2012."

MAYA HITIJ/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Did the enduring success of The List, your recording of your father's list to you of must-listen-to songs, catch you off-guard?
It did. I'm certainly not a big radio artist. In fact, it's hard to garner a lot of radio play for anybody working in my genre at my age. So I knew I couldn't count on that. So then it's, how do I sell this record without a lot of radio play, and it was a challenge for the marketing team to figure out how to present it. But there was a great back story to it and people were interested, and there was more interest in The List than I expected. I thought, 'Oh, this will be a quiet thing and some people will appreciate it.' It did very well, and it was satisfying to me, but I have to admit truthfully, it was a little jarring that I felt like my biggest success in a long time are songs that I didn't write. It shook me a little bit.

Have you made plans to release the entire list to the public?
No, I haven't and I'm not ready to. So much of my dad has been co-opted by the public and this was such a personal thing to me. And I'm just not ready to post it on the Internet or something, you know what I mean? I want to hang on to it for a little while. ... Eventually it should be archived properly, but right now it's mine.

Do you plan to cull another album from the list?
Yeah, I think so. There's certainly a wealth of material and it makes sense. People ask me about that all the time. So I think I would.

Your memoir was very well received. Do your writing ideas come from the same place as your songwriting ideas?
Oh, sure. And if I were a painter it would come from the same place, or a ballet dancer. I think that creative impulse can have a lot of different mediums.

Is it easier to share personal things because you've done it for decades in song?
That was a different experience as far as revelation or the feeling of revelation, anyway, because in songs, even though people think my songs are all confessional, they're not really. I know where I took poetic license. And there was certainly no fact checker at the end of the songs. But writing in the book I did feel a responsibility to the facts as I remember them.

Bublé has personality to go along with good looks

BACKSTAGE PASS

ERIN CEBULA
METRO VANCOUVER

At this Sunday's Grammy Awards, there's no doubt much of the fanfare will be focused on uber-celebs like Beyoncé, Lady Gaga and the Biebs. But Justin isn't the only Canadian performer rockin' the red carpet.

Smither's soul man Alex Cuba, Degrassi rapper Drake, Montreal indie darlings Arcade Fire and B.C.'s own Michael Bublé are all poised to bring home some hardware.

Bublé is no stranger to Grammy success. The 35-year old modern-day crooner with the baby face good looks and boyish charm has two awards under his belt and this year he's back for more. The singer, who once mocked his inability to win against Tony Bennett, is nominated for Best Traditional Pop Vocal Album for Crazy Love and Best Male Pop Vocal Performance for his song Haven't Met You Yet. A ditty that holds a special place in my heart.

Now, I've chatted with Bublé at least a dozen times throughout the years and every interview is an adventure. You have to mentally prepare yourself to spar toe-to-toe with his incredible wit and humour, and to always be prepared for the unexpected (as my Global BC colleague and anchor Chris Gailus recently found out when Bublé jumped onto his lap during an interview).

My most recent Bublé run-in was on the set of the music video shoot for his Grammy-nominated tune Haven't Met you Yet at Killarney Market in Burnaby.

Our interview started out like any other — with casual chit chat about the Ferris Bueller-inspired video, hockey and his beautiful Argentinean fiancée Luisana Lopilato.

But suddenly the conversation took a drastic turn when we began discussing Bublé's dancing abilities.

He said his shabby moves would be overshadowed by the sexier, more experienced performers in the cast.

When I mentioned that not only do I love to cut a rug, but that he "owed" me for all my years of service to his career, he dropped a bomb on me.

"Be in my video then" Bublé exclaimed! "I need you; the video won't be a success without you!" His good-natured mockery was caught on camera, so there was no way for me to back out.

Before I knew it, Hollywood choreographer Paul Becker was teaching me the video moves and figuring out a way to make my "Elaine Benes" style fit.

Call me irresponsible but that's exactly what I did! If you pay really close attention around the 3:30 mark you'll see my 80's shoulders (and cheesy grin) in full effect.

So Michael, if you are reading this column and Haven't Met You Yet wins on Sunday night — I expect a proper shout-out!

ET Canada and Global Television will be front and centre with live red carpet and event coverage from the 53rd Annual Grammy Awards beginning at 7pm.

Erin Cebula is the West Coast correspondent for ET Canada and Global BC. Erin's ET Canada segments can be seen on Global Television airing weeknights at 7:30 p.m.

The Eminem Show 2011?

Grammy watch: Will Eminem finally earn top honours on Music's Biggest Night on Sunday?

The Grammy Awards are in danger of turning into Eminem's own personal Groundhog Day.

It was undoubtedly his year in 2001.

He had created a twisted masterpiece with his sophomore debut, the equal-opportunity offender The Marshall Mathers LP, which did everything the best rock 'n' roll is supposed to do: electrify the youth, delight the critics, offend the parents, outrage society — only it was a rap album.

And yet, when it came to announce album of the year, the trophy went to ... Steely Dan (10 points if you remember the title of THAT one).

In 2003, he had a strong shot at a Grammy with another top-selling, critically acclaimed CD, The Eminem Show.

And it seemed as if the Recording Academy might finally give Eminem his due coronation.

But a jazzy songbird named Norah Jones enchanted them, and he went home without the prestigious award once again.

Now, it's a new decade and a new Eminem.

He's still got the radioactive tongue, but he's endured a painful drug addiction, personal tragedy and an artistic lapse, yet overcome all of them to create Recovery, an album that riveted millions and earned him a leading 10 Grammy nominations.

He's not only nominated for album, but also for record and song of the year for Love the Way You Lie with Rihanna.

It's looking like an Eminem coronation — but looks can be deceiving, and the Grammys have proven time and time again that things aren't always what they seem ... as we explain.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JEFF CHRISTENSEN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RECORD OF THE YEAR

Nominees: Nothin' on You, B.o.B featuring Bruno Mars; Love the Way You Lie, Eminem featuring Rihanna; (Expletive) You, Cee Lo Green, pictured; Empire State of Mind, Jay-Z and Alicia Keys; Need You Now, Lady Antebellum.

Analysis: The real race is between Eminem's haunting Love the Way You Lie and Cee Lo's "Glee"-fully foul (Expletive) You. We think the Grammys will try and show they're not the Grannys — as well as honour what frankly was the best record of the year — with (Expletive) You.

JASON DECROW/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SONG OF THE YEAR (songwriters)

Nominees: Beg Steal or Borrow, Ray LaMontagne, songwriter (Ray LaMontagne and the Pariah Dogs); (Expletive) You, Brody Brown, Cee Lo Green, Ari Levine, Philip Lawrence and Bruno Mars, songwriters (Cee Lo Green); The House That Built Me, Tom Douglas and Allen Shamblin, songwriters (Miranda Lambert); Love the Way You Lie, Alexander Grant, Skylar Grey and Marshall Mathers, songwriters (Eminem, pictured, featuring Rihanna); Need You Now, Dave Haywood, Josh Kear, Charles Kelley and Hillary Scott, songwriters (Lady Antebellum).

Analysis: OK, now here's where we think Eminem will catch a break. (Expletive) You is undeniably catchy with its groove and clever with its wit, but telling a story through song? Well, you cannot beat Eminem's twisted love song for that, which weaves a disturbing, dysfunctional and ultimately haunting story arc in brilliant fashion.

ETHAN MILLER/GETTY IMAGES

ALBUM OF THE YEAR

Nominees: The Suburbs, Arcade Fire; Recovery, Eminem; Need You Now, Lady Antebellum; The Fame Monster, Lady Gaga, pictured; Teenage Dream, Katy Perry.

Analysis: This is Eminem's moment. His Recovery was 2010's bestselling album, and it represented a critical rebirth and triumph: He's the obvious choice for album of the year ... but the Grammys rarely pick the obvious choice. Which brings us to Arcade Fire, the rock band that reached a mainstream milestone this year with The Suburbs and had critics swooning. We're thinking some members of the Recording Academy were swept up into this swoon as well, giving them an excuse to put off Eminem once again.

Real drama on a rural route

DOCUMENTARY. A family's winter road nightmare is profiled on 20/20. When the Kim's of San Francisco took a wrong turn off a highway in 2006, they got stuck on a rural road in a blizzard and spent nine days stranded in the wilderness surrounded by bears. Kati Kim and her two young daughters, one of whom was only seven months old at the time, were rescued. But her husband, who left the car in search of help, was not. (Friday, ABC)

Brand and Brown on SNL

VARIETY. Brash British comedian Russell Brand hosts Saturday Night Live while Chris Brown performs. Brand, who is married to pop star Katy Perry, stars alongside Helen Mirren in the new film The Tempest, and Brown is set to release his new album – F.A.M.E. – next month. (Saturday, Global, NBC)

REALITY. A Grammy nominee from the 1990s shows off his home renovation skills in The Vanilla Ice Project. Yes, rapper Vanilla Ice kicks off a series in which he and a crew of contractors make over a mansion in Florida. (Sunday, DIY Network Canada) THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sunset's cast glows

Jackson and Jones team up for bare bones two-man TV movie

HBO, DAWN JONES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A college professor distraught about his life and the state of the world hurls himself in front of a subway train. He is rescued by a born-again ex-convict.

We don't witness this event. The Sunset Limited takes place wholly in the rescuer's one-room tenement apartment, where he has brought the would-be suicide to try convincing him that his life has value and is worth holding onto.

Between this pair of lonely strangers, a spirited – in many ways – debate ensues.

The Sunset Limited stars Tommy Lee Jones as the tormented atheist (labeled, simply, White) who has abandoned all hope for mankind and "the primacy of the intellect," and Samuel L. Jackson as a killer-turned-believer (dubbed Black) who claims he doesn't know anything that's not straight from the Bible.

Black wants to argue White out of making another suicide attempt. White, though repeatedly starting for the door, sticks around to make his own bleak case and defy the other man's hard-won faith.

Premiering Saturday at 9 p.m. EST on HBO, The Sunset Limited is gripping, disturbing and, at times, mordantly funny.

The Sunset Limited is remarkably animated for such a scaled-down film, propelled by two fine performances and drawn from the 2006 play of the same name by Cormac McCarthy, Pulitzer-prize-winning author of such novels as Blood Meridian, All the Pretty Horses and No Country for Old Men, which became a hit 2007 Oscar winner in which Jones starred.

"I read the play some time ago and I always liked it, was fascinated by it," says Jones during a recent joint interview with Jackson at HBO offices. "I happened to run into Cormac one day in Santa Fe, and I got around to telling him that I thought it would be a good idea to make a film of it. And he agreed with me."

The film, though set in New York City's Harlem, was made in Santa Fe, N.M., in fall 2009, with Jones executive producer as well as director.

Divorce fallout: One baby boy

Sources claim Simpson is seeking out primary custody of son, Bronx

Ashlee Simpson has filed for divorce from husband Pete Wentz after two and a half years of marriage, according to People magazine.

"After careful consideration, we have made the difficult decision to file for divorce," the couple said in a statement.

"We remain friends and deeply committed and loving parents to our son, Bronx, whose happiness and well-being remains our No. 1 priority."

Simpson is reportedly seeking primary physical custody of their son.

Longoria getting cosy with Cruz's bro?

Things seems to be heating up between Eva Longoria and Eduardo Cruz, brother of actress Penelope Cruz, according to Popeater.

"Eva and Eduardo were kissing and cuddling and looked very romantic," a source says of the pair's behaviour at a South Beach, Fla., Super Bowl viewing party.

And the tryst seems to be doing wonders for the Desperate Housewives star.

"During the past few weeks, Eva seems to have come alive again," a source says.

"She is usually fun, flirty and a blast to be around. That side of her came back after a few months of distress."

Name of baby revealed?

While Penelope Cruz and Javier Bardem have been keeping details on their new baby under wraps, a friend may have spilled the beans on the boy's name.

"I know what you want, and you don't understand why they don't come running to show off the baby and say, 'Look, here's Leo,'" Spanish director Santiago Segura said while discussing the couple with reporters, according to People. When reporters asked if the baby's name was in fact Leo, Segura said, "Yeah, Leo. I think so. That's what I think I heard. But they haven't said anything."

Sheen's mess-ups not affecting Men fans

PEOPLE While there have been plenty of news stories obsessing over Charlie Sheen's wild partying and substance abuse issues, fans of his hit show, Two and Half Men, aren't fazed, according to a poll conducted by the Hollywood Reporter.

A whopping 82 per cent of women and 76 per cent of men polled said they will continue watching the show regardless of Sheen's personal issues, and 90 per cent don't consider his behaviour a problem as long as he does his job. And only four per cent of those polled want Sheen to quit the show.

Celebrate love with a little Ménage à Trois...

PETER ROCKWELL
LIQUIDASSETS@EASTLINK.CA
TWITTER: @THEREALWINEGUY

While most thoughts will turn to flowers and chocolates this weekend before Valentine's Day, my mind is on a ménage à trios. Before you start emailing, I mean the wine — not the other thing.

Made in California by the Folie à Deux Winery, the idea behind the cheeky name is that the Ménage à Trios wines are created from a trio of grape varieties or, in the case of the chardonnay, the same grape from three different regions in the state.

The 2009 Ménage à Trois ($17.95 - $19.99) is made with a triple blend of zinfandel, merlot and cabernet sauvignon.

Rich and ripe with just a kiss of residual sugar, it makes for a great all-purpose dinner wine as well as a mouth-filling on-its-own sipper perfect for a candle lit tête à tête.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

In many cultures, rosemary has a long history as an aphrodisiac, an herb with the power to keep fidelity and love strong.

So why not tap that history to grow a little romance of your own on Valentine's Day? This three-course meal isn't speedy, but the effort will win you the admiration of your love.

Cream of Cauliflower and Rosemary Soup

Preparation:

1. In saucepan, melt butter over medium-high; add shallot and rosemary and sauté until shallot is tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Add flour and stir to coat. Cook for 1 minute, whisk in milk and cream.
2. Add cauliflower, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring frequently, until cauliflower is very soft and mixture has thickened.
3. Using an immersion blender or working in batches in a regular blender, puree mixture until very smooth. Adjust seasoning with additional salt and pepper, if needed. Drizzle with rosemary oil.

Rosemary Seared Tenderloin with Honeyed Sweet Potato and Blue Cheese Green Beans

Preparation:

1. Prick sweet potato all over with a fork. Microwave on High for 5 to 6 minutes or until completely tender. Let cool slightly. Peel and mash potato in small bowl. Stir in butter, honey, salt and pepper. Cover and keep warm.
2. Beef Tenderloin: Rub salt and rosemary all over the steaks. In a large oven-safe skillet heat butter and oil over medium-high. Sear steaks on each side until well-browned, 2 to 3 minutes per side. Place skillet in 350 F (180C) oven and cook until meat thermometer inserted in centre reaches 125 F (52 C). Remove from oven, tent with foil and let rest for 10 minutes.
3. Blue Cheese Green Beans: Meanwhile, bring small saucepan of water to boil. Add beans and cover. Boil until bright green and just tender, about 3 minutes. Drain beans, then transfer to a bowl. Add blue cheese, salt and pepper; toss to combine. Sprinkle with almonds, if using.
4. Serve steaks with sweet potato and green beans

Chocolate Prices

Cupid got off easy this Valentine's Day, but spikes in cocoa bean and sugar prices may have the Easter bunny digging deeper into your pocket for those chocolate eggs.

By Easter, prices likely will rise, possibly by as much as five per cent, said Marcia Mogelonsky, U.S.-based global food analyst for Mintel.

There are a few reasons behind the increase, including political turbulence in Ivory Coast, the world's largest producer of cocoa beans, that led to a one-month ban on exports that was announced in late January.

Phil Lempert, a food marketing expert, agrees that with raw materials becoming more expensive, prices are bound to be affected.

Fisher gone, more moves expected

[redacted] just the start of Senators' rebuilding

It looks like rebuilding plans are underway for the Ottawa Senators.

The struggling team sent forward Mike Fisher to Nashville on Thursday in exchange for the Predators' first-round pick this year and a conditional pick in next year's NHL entry draft.

Senators general manager Bryan Murray expects more changes to be made ahead of the Feb. 28 trade deadline.

"We have a plan in place and an idea that we want to restructure the hockey team to again be a competitive club," Murray said on a conference call.

Fisher, 30, has played 675 career NHL games — all with the Senators. He has recorded 24 points (14 goals, 10 assists) and 33 penalty minutes in 55 games this season.

It has been a disastrous season for the Senators, who are winless in 11 games and sit last in the Northeast Division with 42 points.

"We know that we have to make some changes," Murray said. "When we perform like we did this year, a variety of things have to happen."

Nashville, meanwhile, is gearing up for a playoff run. The Predators are just five points behind first-place Detroit in the Central Division.

Fisher is married to music star Carrie Underwood, who has a home in Nashville. The couple married last summer in Georgia.

"I'm sure there was a lot of places and a lot of teams that would've coveted Mike," Nashville general manager David Poile said on a conference call. "But on the surface the fit for Nashville with his wife, certainly we're hoping is going to be an attractive situation for Mike and his wife."

The Predators hope to have his work visa completed Friday so he can be in the lineup Saturday night against Colorado.

Fisher said news of the trade was a bit of a shock that he still was trying to process, but he's excited about joining the Predators.

"They're a very good team, and it'll be kind of like going home for me," Fisher said on the Senators' website. "I'm sure my wife won't be disappointed, either. But I think it's a great place for me and family and everything."

A native of Peterborough, Ont., Fisher was originally selected by Ottawa with the 44th overall pick in the 1998 NHL entry draft. His annual salary cap hit is $4.2 million US. He'll make $4 million next season and $3 million in 2012-'13.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

The conditions

The conditional pick in the trade will be Nashville's third-round selection if the Predators win one round in the post-season this year. The pick becomes a second-round selection in 2012 if Nashville wins two rounds or more.

NO MORE FIFTH BUSINESS

Opinion

SCOTT RUSSELL
FIELD OF PLAY

The Canadian home Olympics are a year gone. But a change in attitude lingers.

While we rejoice in 14 gold medals and 26 podium results, the close encounters are more indicative of a seismic shift in expectations on the part of Canadian competitors.

Almost winning doesn't count anymore … a good thing for a country that fancies itself a sporting nation.

Five fifth-place finishes at the 2010 Games warrant re-examination.

Melissa Hollingsworth ended up fifth in skeleton over the course of four heats — a mere half-second from the gold-medal total of Amy Williams of Great Britain. It was a miniscule margin of defeat that left Hollingsworth distraught, declaring, "I let my entire country down."

But Hollingsworth soldiered on, and instead of quitting she committed herself to the journey to Sochi in 2014. In eight World Cup races this season she's been on the podium three times and is ranked third in the world.

"It stinks," Patrick Chan said after finishing fifth in figure skating. But then again he learned something.

"I saw that one day I could dominate my sport."

Now Chan is the Grand Prix champion, has the quad jump in his arsenal and has the inside track on next month's world championship in Tokyo.

On the last day of the Games in the biggest cross-country ski race, the 50-kilometre marathon, Sudbury's Devon Kershaw was fifth, 1.6 seconds from gold. He got lost in the dust of the Sidney Crosby goal and the men's hockey victory.

"That opportunity is gone forever," Kershaw said of that ordeal. "But it was the most motivating thing that could ever happen to me." This season in the massive Tour de Ski, Kershaw scored his first World Cup victory and found the podium four times in eight races.

Finally, there's alpine skier Erik Guay.

Fifth in both the downhill and Super G at Whistler, Guay missed two gold medals by the sum total of eight-tenths of a seconds — or the blink of an eye.

He wasn't the hottest interview afterwards. But he did collect himself to score three podium results and win the Crystal Globe to end the campaign. He's also the only Canadian to win a medal on this year's World Cup circuit.

That's the legacy of Vancouver, plain and simple. Nowadays for Canadian athletes this business of finishing fifth equals one thing: Unfinished business.

In the 23 years that Jerry Sloan was the coach of the Jazz …

Hall of Famer Jerry Sloan stepped down Thursday after 23 seasons at the helm of the Utah Jazz, saying he simply ran out of the energy to coach anymore.

"I had a feeling this time was the time to move on," an emotional Sloan said. "(That's) a long time to be in one organization. Again, I've been blessed. Today is a new day. When I get this over with, I'll feel better. My time is up and it's time to move on."

Here's a look at some of the things that have happened during his career. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

… he won 1,127 games with the team

He is the only coach in NBA history to win 1,000 games with one team, a feat he accomplished Nov. 7 against Oklahoma City.

… the Clippers have had 13 coaches

While Sloan has headed the Jazz, there have been 245 coaching changes around the league.

… five new teams were created

Charlotte, Memphis, Toronto, Orlando and Minnesota all joined the league during his tenure.

… the salary cap has increased eight-fold

It went from $7.232 million US in 1988 to $58.044 this season. Jazz guard Deron Williams is making $14,940,153.

… he led his team to two NBA finals

They lost both times to the Chicago Bulls (in 1997 and 1998), losing each series in six games.

Allen sets standard for 3-pointers

Ray Allen broke the NBA record for three-pointers Thursday night, sinking two in the first quarter against the Los Angeles Lakers as the man he passed, Reggie Miller, sat courtside working the TV broadcast. Allen hit his second three-pointer of the game with 1:48 left in the first quarter to reach 2,561 in his career — a number that flashed on the scoreboard in green and white while the TD Garden erupted in applause. The Lakers went on to beat the Celtics 92-86.

Caps open B.C. Place with rivalry matchup

MATT KIELTYKA
@METRONEWS.CA

[illegible] p will play their first game at B.C. Place against the rival Portland Timbers during an inaugural Major Soccer League season full of exciting dates.

The MLS released its 2011 schedule Thursday and Whitecaps CEO Paul Barber is thrilled the highly anticipated first game at B.C. Place on Oct. 2 is against a historic rival.

"We were always hoping to have a Northwest team to help open B.C. Place," said Barber, who promised matches against Seattle and Portland would all be hotly contested derbies.

The Seattle Sounders will be in town for a piece of history as well, as they face off against the Caps for the last MLS game at Empire Field Sept. 24.

All three teams have strong supporters who revel in the regional rivalry, so the atmosphere inside will likely be dialed to the proverbial Spinal Tap-inspired "11."

The team officially rings in the MLS era with the previously announced match at Empire Field against Toronto FC on Saturday, March 19.

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You must figure out a money or business problem of some sort today. Don't let anyone talk you into accepting less than you are entitled to.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You have all the energy you need but that is not an excuse, still less an invitation, to take too many risks. If you try too hard, your efforts to impress someone in a position of power could backfire.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 An unspoken fear has been gnawing away at you for ages and it's about time that you dealt with it once and for all. If you face up to it today, it will most likely turn out to be nothing at all. Be brave. Be bold.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You must let rivals know that you are not the sort of person who cracks under pressure. Today's cosmic set-up will give you zero tolerance when it comes to bossy people.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Forget about trying to impress employers and other authority figures with boasts about all the great things you are going to do in the future and do something right now.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You want nothing more than to be left alone at the moment and if other people know what's good for them, they will give you plenty of time and space. If they don't know what's good for them, they'll soon learn!

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Why are you so obsessive about something, or someone, that has nothing to do with you? Whatever the reason, you need to break the habit today because it is taking too much of your emotional energy.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 A relationship has reached a turning point and either today or over the weekend you will have to decide whether to take it in a new direction or end it.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Focus on the big picture and let other people take care of the little things, even though you could handle them yourself. Time is precious, and your time is better spent on strategic planning.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Sometimes, you are too cautious. Today, you will go to the other extreme and do something that is a bit radical. Imagine what the consequences might be. Then do it anyway.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 If you don't come to grips with a situation soon it will take on a life of its own and get beyond your control. You've got to forget about the past and create a new future for yourself.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Something will happen today that will make you angry with people in positions of power. Yes, they are taking liberties, and yes, they need to be made aware that it's not right.

LOOK AGAIN

SPOT THE 10 DIFFERENCES IN THESE TWO IMAGES.

Sussex, England – Even in the countryside, the all-new 2011 Chevrolet Cruze fits right in while still managing to stand out. Even the farmers can't resist giving the Cruze a second look. Perhaps it's time for a new set of wheels fellas.
